

Brian Dunagan, IFO Group - Houston
Managing Consultant and Chief Investigator

Brian is a Managing Consultant with IFO Group and is based in Houston, Texas. He is an executive management veteran, with prior assignments in energy exploration and production, midstream, downstream (refining and gas processing), and corporate HSSE management for several Fortune 50 companies. He is a Certified Safety Professional (Board of Certified Safety Professionals) and is a Certified Fire and Explosion Investigator and Instructor. Brian is a Professional Member of the American Society of Safety Engineers with inclusion in the Fire Protection and Oil and Gas Practice Specialties, and is a Professional Member of the National Association of Fire Investigators.

He has extensive U.S. and international experience as a recognized expert in process safety and occupational safety with a large number of successful projects in the energy, paper and pulp, chemical, refining, heavy manufacturing, and EPC (Engineering, Procurement, and Construction) industries. In addition, he has a successful record of leading and managing very high profile / high value loss incident investigations involving process related explosions and fires, occupational injuries and fatalities, equipment failures, human factors / errors, and engineering failures. A significant part of his litigation support practice involves loss of life and major disabling injury incidents.

Brian has led and managed multiple “mega-loss” process safety related incident investigations involving major loss of life, $500M+ asset loss and impairment, and intense regulatory and public scrutiny.
